Things to Do this Summer in Norfolk County

Bonnieheath Estate Lavender & Winery

One of Norfolk County's most visually beautiful places, Bonnieheath Estate Lavender & Winery is the perfect getaway destination to indulge in a field of lavender and enjoy a glass of wine or cider as you explore the charming estate. The estate is a re-purposed tobacco farm that is now abundant with crops, grains, lavender, and grapes.

- Villa Nova Estate Winery
- Waterford Antique
- Whistling Gardens

Turkey Point Provincial Park What makes Turkey Point Provincial Park special is its proximity to restaurants, a winery, and a marina, and its reputation as the only provincial park with a golf course. This down-to-earth park offers car campsites, three tranquil trails that pass forested areas and the bluff overlooking Long Point Bay, and is the site for the Turkey Point Mountain Bike Club.

Punchline

By Jim Pepper

A lot of what I've written was chosen to try and make the day happier for you and hopefully give you a smile. Most of it has come from back in my past; times rooted often in my profession, times with long ago pets and things like that. For this week I have something refreshingly new that happened just within the past few weeks.

Some of you may be aware that I played my banjo this past weekend as part of the opening festivities of a new shop in Port Rowan, called "Y - Not." What with covid it had been a very long time since I'd played in public, and naturally I was a tad apprehensive. The best thing to do when I'm like that I've found, is to prepare as best I can with lots of practice and preparation.

Thus, it was that I set up to do just that in the shade of the maple tree in our backyard. Everything was all in readiness; the canvas lawn chair was set out, a cold, opened 16-ounce Diet Pepsi was on the attached side table of the chair and my music stand and music book were set up. All was ready for me to just go inside and get my banjo and begin to rehearse a bit.

So, in I went and out I came, banjo in hand into the heat of the mid-afternoon and plunked myself down... all ready to get at it. Now I forgot to tell you that Bear was outside as well. (We got Bear because his friendly, constantly wagging Labrador tail kept knocking down a little tyke, and the previous owners were afraid of an injury to the little guy.). The tail has never slowed down and struck again.

While I'd been inside, Bear's tail and ever active nose had been at work. He had knocked over my cold Pepsi, tipping it over to pour precisely onto the seat of my lawn chair. As I said, when I came out, I just plunked down into my chair without a look only to be jolted by a pool of cold Pepsi right under my ample bottom... My first thought was, "Wow, is that cold and wet!", but also, "What the heck, it's so darn hot, I might just as well stay here and enjoy having a suddenly cooled derriere." And that is just what I did.

It was my first practice session ever with a wet bottom, a bouncing dog and thoughts of, "Is he preparing me for what's to come in life hopefully many years in the future or simply taking me that back in time to when I was that tyke with a wet bum?"

OUR OUTREACH ON RWANDA #9

By JoAnne Easton

Lines and Tales - from Rwanda-

Another place the 10 of us visited in 2007, was Lake Kivu, which is a lake between Rwanda and the Congo. Lake Kivu is labeled the Deadliest Lake in the World because of the amount of carbon dioxide and methane in the lower layers. It is a beautiful lake though, very much a paradise but with the off-chance of explosion or fire.

I see in May, there was a fire on the lake, as the gas escaped after an earthquake. (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RHMZsvJ8x0>)

Not only did we stop on our way to Lake Kivu, at the destroyed church mentioned before where so many died, we stopped at a bridge said to be over one source of the Nile, where young people played their home-made instruments hoping tourists would pay to hear their music.

We had lunch at a hotel-like establishment with a view of the lake. It took over an hour to get any food. Time for a cold drink though. It was off season and we were not expected but things are slower in Rwanda anyway. We then set out to find a refugee camp which took us up a very windy road with no barriers on the outer road-side as protection from a very steep fall. I also learned later; the condition of our vehicles' tires left a lot to be desired with little tread. It seemed like forever we travelled on that dirt road going higher and higher. Then in the distance, over the crest of a high hill we could see a cluster of substantial buildings with primitive circular mud huts on the outskirts of the fence that surrounded the camp. We were in 3 vehicles, stopped outside the gates and while our interpreters inquired about entry, we were swarmed by young children. As we had the windows down, one young boy with a ball made out of old paper and string struck up a conversation with my husband and commented on his fuzzy, hairy arm. We didn't get access to the camp but on leaving he touched my husband and said "Pray for me, Fuzzy Bob". As we surveyed our surroundings and the mud huts of his future, it was an emotional moment. My husband still tells this story when the memorable moments of our Rwanda visit are remembered and shared.

Some of the children who created their musical instruments to make money to help themselves and family survive.

Will continue again next week...
