HIGH FLIGHT

The Battle of Britain Sunday is observed on the 15th September or the first Sunday following.

There were 1,495 pilots and crew killed during the Battle of Britain, of which 49 were Canadian. Of 103 Canadian fighter pilots in battle, 23 were killed in action. Many Canadians served in the squadrons of Spitfires and Hurricanes which repulsed the Luftwaffe in the summer of 1940. To limit confusion, the RCAF squadrons were operated as separate units from the RAF, generally keeping the Canadians together. Other Canadians flew with the Royal Air Force during that difficult period. As Winston Churchill famously said: "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few." We give thanks for airmen like John Pringle QC, Ken Keegan and all those who served in the cause of freedom. Lest we forget, Lest we forget.

For the week beginning Sunday September 19, 2021, we will be praying for our Long Point Bay Parish, specially for our family of the church of St. John's Woodhouse.

David Howes, Michael and Betty Howes, Nancy Howe-Olmstead, Jewson Bev, Fred and Sharon Judd, Thomas and Sarah Judd, Richard and Sarah Kersten, John and Shirly Luke, June Miller, Paul and Pearl Mills, Robert Moore, Doug Murphy, Judy Peach, Jo Anne Pos, Grant and Janice Schultz, David and Miriam Woods, Walter Wychopen.

For our Bishop Todd and Rev. Rick and family, Rev. Jack Cox and family, Rev. Paul Sherwood, Fr. Enrique and Family.

1. Who will not inherit the kingdom of God?
2. What does James tell us is dead without works?
3. Who was the first human born?

HOW CAN I KEEP FROM SINGING?

On the front page of the Huron Church News this month there was an article 'Reopening our churches: the next steps' At the time the article was put together it looked like restrictions regarding congregational singing and choirs were going to be loosened up slightly. . . Alleluia! (I heard my inner voice proclaim). However, with so many things during this pandemic, due to the recent rise in Covid-19 cases in Ontario this has since changed. I want all people to know that the bishop is not being draconian, the diocese is simply erring on the side of caution with regards to our health and safety. Therefore, for the month of September, the current restrictions of congregational singing and choirs will remain in effect. I know it is frustrating and spiritually painful, but it is one of the many sacrifices we have had to make during these testing times. With new regulations concerning 'vaccine passports' being introduced by the Provincial Government coming into effect on 22nd September the diocese is also implementing extra measures in the interests of health and safety: "As Christians, we welcome all in the name of Christ and so the diocese will not be requiring vaccinations for all persons attending worship. However, those in ministry leadership positions have been entrusted with responsibilities which include protection of the vulnerable. For this reason, the following people will now be required to be vaccinated against COVID-19 to serve in the Diocese of Huron during this pandemic. All clergy who are presently in an appointment, interims, those who function as honorary assistants and who do supply. All Licensed Lay Readers. All liturgical leaders including, but not limited to, organists and choir directors, choristers, musicians, lectors, intercessors, Eucharistic Administrators, wardens, greeters and servers over 12 years of age. All Sunday School teachers and youth leaders. All pastoral visitors. To continue in these roles, all persons must have received their first dose of vaccine by September 30th and the second no later than October 31st." (Diocese of Huron) Just to make that clear friends: No one has to show proof of vaccination status to worship at Trinity church. However, those in leadership roles, those involved in the liturgy and other areas of ministry do need to be vaccinated. Therefore, starting next week, I am asking those involved in the various ministries mentioned above to either come to the parish office during office hours to show proof of vaccination to Kathryn, Sarah or myself or to show one of us on Sunday. The parish will maintain a record of the lay persons in these roles with an indication that they have provided proof of vaccination. The record will be kept securely. I am hopeful that this new requirement will not be viewed in a negative light but from the Christian perspective of loving our neighbours as ourselves. From conversations that I have had with many parishioners, who have returned to worship at church, all have been vaccinated and happy so to be. As we gather this information; I crave your indulgence. Yours in Christ.

Well last weekend's storm was quite the light show and wind event, wasn't it? We were without hydro for about 20 hours and herein lies the source of this week's laugh at myself and at life in general.

First some background. A few weeks ago I hurt my lower back, and it hasn't responded to any treatment so I walk about just like what I am, an old man. Fortunately my son in law lives close by, and he has been a great help to me whenever something needs to be done that requires lifting, pulling or whatever those activities are that people my age can't do with ease.

So when Hydro One sent out their notice about the power being off for well into Monday night, he came down and offered to help me get the generator going. Then Pat (who he was secretly trying to please) could finally open the fridge and see what the situation was. I'd assured her that if fridges and freezers are kept shut, they'll keep things quite well for two or three days, but she has lived with me long enough to know that most of my truisms are really just old men's tales calculated to save the bother (that is, bother to me).

We set about to get the generator out of the garage and fire up the old thunder-banger so I could hook up the default panel and once again have Edison's miracle light us up. First off, was to move Ethan's snow tires which have been waiting since last March to be put away (tomorrow). Then to see if between us we could remember how to start old sparky (no pun intended) and shed some light on the subject. After a five minute hunt to find an operating flashlight, we were ready to go.

Finally through more good luck than good management we remembered which switches to push and which to pull, and away she went with a roar that would awaken even Methusalah. I hooked the feeder cord into the default panel and wonder of wonders, the lights came on. Hooray for us!!!

Well maybe not yet.

When we had the default panel installed, we didn't have the freezer in the garage, so there was no need to have it included on the panel. But we were quickly reminded by you know who... she was dying to open said freezer and check the hundreds of items that we have had frozen solid for the last seven years. Who knows? Maybe the left-over peas from two Christmases ago might have to be thrown out.

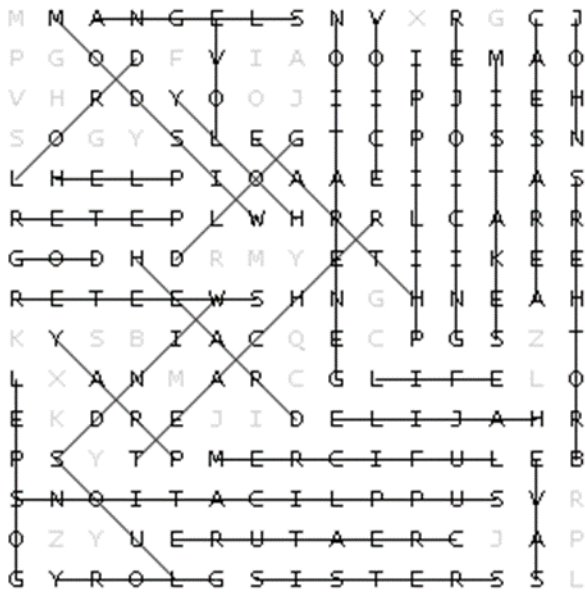

So with a spare extension cord I climbed over two bags of margarine containers, some with lids and some without and reached the outlet where the freezer plug was. I pulled out the plug and inserted it into the extension cord just as Ethan (who had been watching this whole circus and in the process adding to his vocabulary) announced, "Oh look, the hydro just came back on!"

Oh well, at least I was right about the fridge. The beer was still cold...

OUR OUTREACH ON RWANDA #17

By JoAnne Easton

Lines and Tales - from Rwanda-

The school has brought so much to the community. There is a community committee that meet to discuss the progress of the school, the challenges and the plans for the future and how the community and school can work together for a common goal. When I first saw the school location it was an empty field near a river on the boundary of a remote village called Vunga.

Vunga area is a very impoverished village with mud brick houses. There was no electricity, no municipal water and no health aid close by.

During the development of the school from a five-room schoolhouse, carpentry building, welding shop, cafeteria, teacher's residence, a residence for 112 students, masonry shop, latrines, storage buildings and buildings to keep some animals were gradually acquired. With pressure from the school administration, the water line was extended to the Vunga area so the village and the school received water, although there was a cost for every jerry-can. A well was dug on school property and a submersible pump was installed. Water lines were dug to the different major buildings so water was available. There was also a line extended to off-site so the community could access water from the well. Before the municipal water and the well water was available, the community would travel to the river to get their water which wasn't safe to drink. I believe the stomach problems have been lessened with this new way to get decent water from the municipality or the school well.

In Rwanda, the sun rises at 6 am and sets at 6 pm so they have equal light and dark so without electricity everything basically stops once dark. Solar panels were sent from Germany that provided a certain amount of light and is now maintained by Emmanuel who visited Canada. With more involvement and push to get the hydro line extended it finally arrived to the village and the school. The welding class was then moved to the school as electricity was needed to operate the welders.

It is my understanding that because the school existed at Vunga that a basic clinic was created and I did take a short tour of it a few years ago. One year, I noted there were mother's and babies sitting outside the clinic waiting to be seen.

There was to be a market place at a rural village in the region and the Director at the time recommended to the government that it be put at Vunga, given the school was active in that location. Vunga village got the building.
